I think structuring the data has an algorithm all its own in addition to the algorithm for the learning or training of a neural network. Therefore I recommend that both parts be considered separately as a part of a team of inventors. Personally I had put my feelers out to the Fortune 100 companies to see if they would be interested in research and development further of one of my real-world problems that I wanted to address. Therefore I see them as it definitely one of the inventors since they would be funding funding the laboratory to experiment in.
